Please stand up if your base not have Security Forces attached
DoD Policy

- Nuclear weapons require special consideration because of their policy implications, military importance, destructive power, and the political consequences of an accident or an unauthorized act. The safety, security, control, and effectiveness of nuclear weapons are of paramount importance to the security of the United States.

The Air Force

- The Air Force executes this manual using a Personnel Reliability Assurance Program (PRAP) comprised of two elements. (PRAP is overarching designation for the Air Force's two nuclear reliability programs, the Personnel Reliability Program (PRP), and Arming and Use of Force (AUoF))
  - PRAP is the umbrella program encompassing both PRP and AUoF
PRP

Regulatory Guidance

DoDM 5210.42_AFMAN13-50, Nuclear Weapons Personnel Reliability Program

- The CMA is the sole authority in determining what information qualifies as medical factors that may affect an individual’s suitability for PRP, and will convey these factors to the certifying official.
- Continuous Evaluation.
- Continuous Monitoring.

AFI 31-117, Arming and Use of Force

- Treating providers, or the responsible medical clinic, will ensure immediate notification to the member’s commander, or designated command representative, when the treating provider identifies a condition capable of impairing a Security Forces member’s ability to safely perform armed duties. (T-1) Providers should use common sense assessments to decide whether a notification is required.
- Continuous Monitoring

PRAP: WHAT
PRP = Timely

- MTF/CC Ensures PRAP medical screenings, evaluations, and notifications are accomplished in a timely and accurate manner.

AUoF = Immediate

- Treating providers, or the responsible medical clinic, will ensure immediate notification to the member’s commander, or designated command representative, when the treating provider identifies a condition capable of impairing a Security Forces member’s ability to safely perform armed duties.
